Evolve your documentation improvement

Clinical Documentation Improvement (CDI) has expanded tremendously over the last decade. Many organizations are still performing CDI the same way they did 10 years ago, leading their hospital performance and ranking to suffer. Many risk-adjustment programs across the U.S. rely on accurate documentation to assess hospital rankings and identify poor areas of safety and performance.

This on-demand series is an introduction to the ways in which CDI specialists, their leaders and their programs can evolve their CDI roles to positively impact hospital performance. Some of the topics will include risk-adjustment, bundled payments, quality and patient-safety indicator prevention and emergency department documentation. The world of CDI continues to grow, and this series will ensure participants stay up to date on the numerous and ever-changing aspects of CDI and coding.

Target audience

We encourage individuals in CDI, coding nursing and quality, as well as physician advisors for CDI, quality, etc., to view on-demand.
