To our Valued Customers:

We have been notified by one of our suppliers that they are recalling cilantro, used as an ingredient in a product we provide to you. The recall is due to the possible presence of foreign materials that were identified by the USDA as wood, which are actually cotton stems from nearby fields. We have not received any consumer complaints at this time or any reports of illness or injury.

USDA has issued a public health alert that publicly identifies products you may sell.

The SKUs that are included in the alert are:

Out of an abundance of caution, and based on the public health warning, we advise you to discard any product in inventory. Our customer service team will follow up with replenishment information.

We also have inventory on hold. As a result, you may experience cuts to the orders you have placed with us on these varieties. We are actively working to replenish inventory at this time.

We apologize for this inconvenience and appreciate your business. Please don't hesitate to contact me with any questions.

Sincerely,

The Campbell's Company
