Target Audience: Chief quality officers, Chief medical officers, quality executives and leaders medical executives and leaders

Overview: For quality and medical executives, success depends on knowing which warning signs matter and acting before the window closes. This session will show how leading health systems turn early safety risks and diagnostic signals into faster executive action and stronger system response. Through examples in safety governance and sepsis detection, attendees will hear how earlier visibility can drive accountability, reduce harm, and improve outcomes.

Operations Executives Peer to Peer Education Meeting | Audience: Clients (link to agenda pending)

8 – 11:15 a.m.

Target Audience: Chief operations officers, operations executives and leaders

Health systems face many interconnected challenges: multiple strategic initiatives create coordination tensions while operational bottlenecks constrain capacity, throughput, and access, and limit growth. These aren't isolated problems. Integration gaps cause operational inefficiency, higher operating expenses and strained team morale. Join this session to identify how leading organizations build governance infrastructures that drive coordinated operational performance.

Governance maturity impacts both financial results and operational metrics. Systems with clear priorities, transparent scorecard data, and coordinated execution achieve sustained top performance on margin, length of stay, ED throughput, and capacity utilization. Come prepared to discuss models of integrated operations, including governance structures that unite strategic and operational priorities, align goal setting and advance a culture of continuous improvement. You'll leave with frameworks for building the governance backbone that enables sustained operational excellence
